Fuel Prices

Can we do something TOGETHER, about the cost of fuel?

We understand gasoline price increases are hard to take.
So we're doing something about it.

Did you know?

It's all about supply and demand.

- Despite rising gasoline prices, America is buying more fuel than ever.
- The United States consumes 25% of the world's energy, but only has 4% of the world's population.
- Despite a growth in supply, significant gasoline imports are needed to meet America's demand.
- Currently, the refining industry is operating at capacity.

Did you know?

ConocoPhillips is doing something about increasing the supply of fuel.

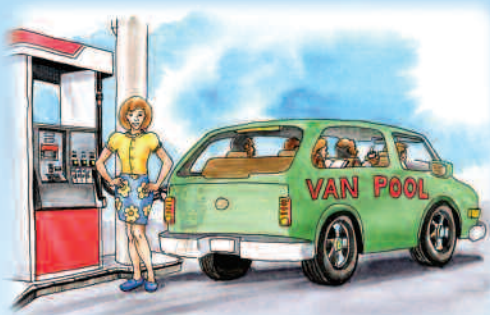

- We're investing profits back into refining capacity and oil production.
- We're actively supplying alternative fuels.
- We're funding university research supporting alternative fuel development.

Did you know?

We can all do something about gasoline prices.

- Reduce demand by driving less, car-pooling, taking public transportation.
- Drive more fuel-efficient vehicles.
- Encourage local and state officials to accelerate the permitting approval process to build new refining and pipeline capacity.

We understand that gasoline price increases are difficult for everyone. With your help in reducing demand and our focus on supply, we intend to improve this difficult situation. Thank you for your business.
